DRPT and FRA to Host Public Meetings to Present Alternatives for the Washington, D.C. to Richmond Southeast High Speed Rail Project

December 8, 9, and 10, 2015

RICHMOND—The Virginia Department of Rail and Public Transportation (DRPT), in cooperation with the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA), has scheduled public information meetings for the Washington, D.C. to Richmond Southeast High Speed Rail (DC2RVA) project in order to present the most feasible improvement alternatives for faster, more reliable intercity passenger rail service. The public is invited to attend a public information meeting to learn details of the project and talk with the project team. Identical open-house meetings will be held from 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. with a presentation offered at 6:00 p.m. An online public meeting also is available from December 7, 2015 through January 8, 2016 at www.DC2RVArail.com/online-meeting.

During the meetings, attendees will learn about and have an opportunity to provide input on:

- Results of the initial alternatives screening process.
- Preliminary alternatives for further design and detailed evaluation as part of the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (EIS).
- Richmond area station and track options.

“As part of this project we are evaluating opportunities to improve service reliability, increase the frequency of the trains and reduce travel time,” said Emily Stock, project manager for DC2RVA. “We are looking at potential station locations in Richmond along with various alternatives to add additional capacity to the corridor between Washington, D.C. and Richmond. DRPT’s goal is to make this service more dependable and provide the public with a competitive travel option.”

Although comments and questions may be submitted at any time, comments to be considered during this part of the alternatives review process must be received by January 8, 2016.

Background

The Washington D.C. to Richmond Southeast High Speed Rail (DC2RVA) project includes a Tier II Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for the 123-mile rail corridor that goes through all cities and counties along the I-95 corridor between Arlington, VA, and Chesterfield, VA. The DC2RVA Tier II EIS will evaluate track and safety improvements, bypasses, station options, and reasonable service alternatives for the entire corridor. A Tier I EIS, from Washington, D.C. to Charlotte, NC, was completed in 2002 and included this corridor. The current Tier II EIS is the next step in a rigorous environmental process.

The rail corridor that parallels I-95 is an integral component of the Commonwealth's transportation system.

DC2RVA will improve this critical link in the U.S. intercity passenger rail system between Amtrak's Northeast Corridor (Boston, MA to Washington, D.C.) and the Southeast High Speed Rail corridor. This project is funded through a cooperative agreement between DRPT and FRA for the completion of preliminary engineering and Tier II environmental review.
